INTRODUCTION

The Cherokee Nation has a Tribal Transportation Program Agreement with the United States Department of Transportation. The Cherokee Nation receives Federal Highway Administration ("FHWA") funding for road construction and road rehabilitation projects in accordance with that agreement. The Cherokee Nation is the federally recognized government of the Cherokee people and exercises self-governance in a fourteen county area in northeastern Oklahoma. The seat of tribal government is the W.W. Keeler Complex (tribal headquarters) near Tahlequah, Oklahoma, capital of the Cherokee Nation.
